LOCAL BUILDERS ADOPT 5 DAY WEEK

PLAN NOT TO RAISE WAGES

Starting Feb. 1, building tradesmen of Richmond will adopt a five-day week schedule, with time and a half for work on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

This was agreed upon by a unanimous vote of delegates to the Building Trades Council of Contra Costa county last night in the Brotherhood hall.

Labor leaders of Richmond and Contra Costa county have labeled the move as one of the most important steps ever taken by the local council for a number of years.

Capital, represented by Richmond contractors, were in favor of the move, delegates to the council declared last night.

Every contractor interviewed by the committees from the council declared that they were in favor of the plan, it was announced.

The decision of the local council follows a precedent set by the San Francisco county building trades council. Since Jan. 1 skilled workmen in the trans-bay city have been working the five-day week plan.

Oakland followed the lead with an announcement that on Feb. 1 building trades men would follow the five day schedule.

Common laborers employed in the building industry will not be affected by the change, it was stated last night. It has been found advantageous to have unskilled laborers work on Saturdays to prepare for the skilled workers, it was said.

Under the new plan, building workers will receive their regular daily pay, but will not be paid for Saturday. Time and a half will be paid for overtime work.

As an example, carpenters draw a daily wage of $9. Under the old five and a half day week plan, they received $49.50. Under the new plan they will receive $45 per week. Other workers will be similarly affected.

Those workers affected by the new plan include plumbers, electrical workers, carpenters and other craftsmen employed in the building industry.

Martinez, however, will not be affected by the plan at the present time, it was stated last night.

SNOW HALTS RESCUE PARTY

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Jan. 17.—UP—Snow banks 10 to 12 feet high today barred the way of a rescue party attempting to reach a tiny, storm-swept cabin in which 17 persons have been marooned for five days.

The little company was believed made up of men, women and children, who took shelter in the cabin when their automobiles became stalled on the Flagstaff-Yuba City highway last Monday. They were believed to be about 16 miles north of Flagstaff.

Snow plows were sent out to open the road when word of the group's plight was received from J. W. Hildreth, of Phoenix, Ariz. one of those marooned. The company has been without fuel and wood, he said.

Hildreth floundered through snow drifts and tapped in on a telephone wire probably by means of some ingenious device. He talked to an operator at Tusa City and his message was relayed.

Unconfirmed reports that some 20 other persons were marooned in shacks further along the same road could not be confirmed.

BIRTHS RECORDED

Births of two girls were recently recorded with the city health department. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ivers, 324 Twenty-first street, Jan. 13, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Wendorff, 1212 Barrett avenue, Jan. 14.

Richmond Ford Plant To Follow Standard Plans

OPENING of a new industrial area in Richmond is seen with the start of the Ford Assembly plant here within a short time. Although definite plans have not been announced for the plant to be built here, it is generally believed that they will follow the standard type used by the company. Above are pictures of the plant in Long Beach which is nearing completion, and will be opened March 1. Upper left shows the site of the plant in April, 1929, shortly before construction started. Upper right shows the warehouse now building. Center left shows an interior view of the Assembly plant proper, which measures 300 by 900 feet. The lower right is a view of the plant taken from the adjoining Bascule bridge which spans the connecting channel, while the lower left is another view of the warehouse and loading dock. The figure in the inset is that of Henry Ford, whose vast enterprises are gradually spreading around the globe.

BITTER COLD HITS NATION

CHICAGO, Jan. 17—(U.P.)—A record breaking sub-zero storm settled suddenly tonight over the blizzard swept midwest. Temperatures dropped at the rate of two degrees an hour in most of the central states, going as low as 25 and 30 degrees below zero.

In Chicago the thermometer read nine degrees below zero shortly before midnight, a drop of 16 degrees in eight hours, and VINCENNES, Ind. Jan. 17.—UP—Spirits of southern Indiana's flood stricken citizens rose tonight in direct ratio to the gradual fall of rampaging rivers, estimated to have done more than $50,000,000 damage in the last week.

The crest of the Wabash billowed past Vincennes today at 25.3 feet, higher than the river ever has been. The level re-

BUILDING OF CARS STARTS BEFORE 1931

From all indications there will soon be something doing at the Ford site on the inner harbor, and by the end of this year the great new plant with 2000 workers should be humming with activity, turning out 400 cars each day.

Henry Ford needs his new plant in Richmond. A delegation from Richmond who visited the plant in San Francisco recently found it greatly congested, crowded beyond its capacity, and in fact the whole assembling plant slowed down below the desired schedule because of lack of space.

The San Francisco plant is a five-story building at Twenty-first and Harrison streets and is of a type no longer being constructed by the Ford Motor company. All modern plants are either one or two stories and are built entirely without elevators. No information is now available on the height of the proposed Richmond plant, but it will be either one or two stories with a full equipment of electric cranes to move material from one

LOCAL AUTOMOBILE FACTORY TO BE STARTED IN SHORT TIME

Since announcement of the Ford plant in Richmond was first made here those interested in the project have been watching with a great deal of interest the project of the company in Long Beach. Although the plant in Richmond is to be much larger than the plant in the southern city it will follow the same general lines.

400 Car Capacity

The local plant is to have a capacity of 400 cars a day and will employ approximately 2700 persons according to I. B. Groves manager of the Ford Motor company plant in San Francisco. The San Francisco plant has been turning out 210 cars a day and employing 1400 men.

The Richmond plant when completed will supplant the present San Francisco branch of the company.

The local plant when completed will represent an investment of $5,000,000.

Although no definite date of the start of construction was given in the announcement by Ford or Groves it is known that construction will be started as soon as it is possible as the officials are anxious to have the plant completed at the earliest possible date.

Contractors Here

The Clinton Construction company, builders of the Long Beach plant are nearing the completion of their job in the southern city. Officials of the company have visited Richmond a number of times and it is generally believed that this company will build the local plant.

Word from Long Beach yesterday announced that the plant there would be opened on March 1. It is estimated that the $5,000,000 investment of the Ford company in the southern city will add $300,000 a month to its payroll. The southern plant is located on a 40 acre tract while the Richmond tract is half again

EARLY VOTE ON REPEAL MOVE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17—(U.P.)—The drys took up the battle in earnest today and Senator Borah, Rep., Idaho, promised a Senate test vote soon on a bill to repeal the eighteenth amendment.

Such a vote would be the first Congressional test of the amendment since it was adopted by Congress and ratified by the states a few days over 11 years ago. The drys have big majorities in both houses. Congressional approval by two-thirds majorities in both houses would be necessary before an amendment repealer could be submitted to the state legislatures. So there is little excitement over the issue.

Chairman Norris of the judiciary committee, to which the amendment resolution by Senator Blaine, Rep., Wis., was referred, promised to take up the measure for consideration next week. It is not likely open hearings will be held. Borah's wish for a vote is likely to be fulfilled, as he is recognized as the outstanding bone dry in the Senate.

Mellon Silent

Secretary Mellon in a letter to the Senate judiciary committee refused today to take any stand on the Sheppard bill to penalize the purchaser as well as the seller of liquor.

PAROLE FOR COOK SEEN

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Jan. 17. UP—Dr. Frederick A. Cook went to bed tonight feeling somewhat lifted above the gray shadows of winter twilight in a prison cell. Perhaps a sigh escaped his lips as he surveyed the cramped quarters which have held him prisoner for four years.

The doctor's spirit was uplifted by two events.

Outside in the prison yard a regular North Pole setting had been transplanted outside his window. There is no subject the doctor warms up to more quicker than the Arctic.

The second factor contributing to his happy twilight philosophy was the unconfirmed report that on March 5 he may walk out into the cold world—cold ever since it discovered the doctor did not as he claimed, discover the North Pole in 1908 and colder yet when he was convicted of misusing the mails in questionable Texas Oil promotions.

While the United Press was informed no action has been taken on Cook's eligibility for parole from a 14-year sentence, the Kansas City Journal-Post said in a copyrighted article today that it learned on good authority two of the three parole board members favored Cook's release.

Apartment To Be Improved

An apartment house at Nevin avenue and Eighth street will be improved at a cost of $4000 according to a permit obtained yesterday in the office of A. J. Hurley, city building inspector.

Mrs. Etta Sharo obtained the permit to do the work. The improvements will include the plastering of the outside of the two fronts of the structure, one on Eighth street and the other on Nevin avenue. David Dryden is the contractor.

Ten New Year's Resolutions He Wishes She Would Make!

MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

RESOLVED, that I will never again, as long as I live, say that "men are deceivers ever," or "men never pick up things," or "men are brutes," or "men are so stuck on themselves," or "men are good sports," or "men are helpless," or "men are stupid"—since the only generalization true of all men is that no generalization is true of them; since as far as the east is from the west, so far is the mentality, the morality, the habits and the point of view of some men from other men; and since nothing so pricks the pride of any of them as to be lumped with all the rest of them in a hand-me-down feminine platitude.

Resolved, that even if I am in the lifelong habit of taking for granted every masculine courtesy and tribute, from a seat in the subway to a pearl necklace, from first place in the line before the ticket window to a new fur coat every fall and a new car every spring—even if I think my radiant existence in this vale of tears is sufficient recompense to the whole male sex for giving me the inside track and the biggest piece of pie on every occasion—even if all my hard-boiled and gold-digging friends call me a fool for my pains—nevertheless, I will be graciously and genuinely appreciative of such favors, courtesies and gifts as I receive from the other sex, and I will refuse to hog more than my share.

Resolved, that whatever a man's misdeeds—the telephone call he forgot to make, the night he kept me waiting for ten minutes in front of the World Building, the commutation ticket he lost, the poker game he shouldn't have played, the letters he neglected to mail, the rings and burnt spots on the mahogany table in the library when I came home from the beach, the stock he bought on margin, the fit of temper on his honeymoon, the birthday he forgot—I will observe a statute of limitations and will refrain from harping on any sin after a period of one year from the date of commission.

Resolved, that I will not insist on my husband's taking me with him when he goes to buy a suit or overcoat, that I will not set up a censorship—mostly disapproving—of samples when he is about to order a new suit from his tailor, that I will not buy his shirts and handkerchiefs and that I will limit necktie-buying to Christmas and birthdays—and undertake it then only with anxious prayer and with an exchange proviso, that I will not greet his new hats with disapproving comment; in short, that I will freely permit him to practice the principle of self-determination in wherewithal he shall be clothed.

Resolved, that, while remaining loyal and friendly to my relatives and friends, I will not attempt to shove them down my husband's throat if he does not happen to find them congenial; and that, contrariwise, if I do not happen to care for all of his pre-marital born companion, yet I will not criticise him for seeking their society now and then—provided he lets me out.

Resolved, that the conversation at my quiet home dinners will not consist of a moaning monologue about the wedding-present sherry glasses broken by the maid, the stupidity of the grocer's order clerk in sending prunes when I ordered peas, the carelessness of the laundry in the matter of losing napkins, the impertinence of the janitor—for, after all, my husband has a few troubles of his own.

Resolved, that when I have a date with a young man who, I happen to know, is earning exactly $35 per week, I will not give him to understand that I never travel except in taxis. I will not—even though he asks me to choose a show—select the most expensive musical comedy in town. I will tactfully observe that I like balcony seats—that, in fact, I never sit anywhere else from choice. I will not select the most costly dishes on the dinner menu. I will not hint at supper and a night club after the show, and I certainly will not register scorn—just because the literally poor young man hasn't used all of next week's lunch money to entertain me in the fashion to which I'd like to become accustomed.

Resolved, that I will not start scenes from the pure love of acting, that I will not indulge in a good cry for the relief of my own nerves while pretending that some well-meaning man's brutality is too much for my stricken heart to endure, that I will not consciously be "subtle" and "mysterious" and "incalculable," just to prove that "men can't understand a woman's finer organisms" that, in short, I will not strut my feminine sex to make men uncomfortable, to flatter my egotism and to get my own way.

Resolved, that I will not be a catechist; that I will not ask any man where he was, with whom, how long; or how much money he spent—lost—made; or if he loves me, if he ever loved me, if he still loves me and how much. Ask him no questions and he'll tell me no lies (at least, not so many); and, furthermore, where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise to a man.

Resolved, that I will never be a back seat driver, but will allow every man to run his own job, his own car, his own life—they may be poor things but they are his own, and as such he is entitled to run them without the advice and consent of any female.

THE GIRLS GLOAT
(FOR MARTIN PANZER)

Gloat I.

Misguided man! So you still think
That when a girl ignores your wink,
She hies her home to sit and pine,
And wish and wish she might be thine!
You're wrong, old dear. The bach'lor girl
(Hurrah!) has this defi to hurl:
"The independence that I boast
"Gives me the right to choose my host;
"'Tis I who say, 'You may caress,'
"Or, 'You love more and you love less.'
"And, lastly, please remember this—
"That it takes two to make a kiss,
"And women have no more a yen
"To get along without you men,
"Than men, I say, despite this fuss,
"Would like a world that had not Us!"
P. GATEAU.

Gloat II.

How strange this new and startling fact—
Yes, startling—I repeat again,
This guileful male's just found that women
Cannot exist at all, sans men!

But may I add this observation?—
In everything, from work to swimmin',
It's quite as obvious yes, quite,
That men can't do without their women!
And that's that!
EUKA LAYLIE.

Man Never an Ape, Says Dr. Osborn. —Headline.

Never anything but an ape when he's buying clothes, says any woman. But not with any more stocks bought on margin.

Winter-Spring Modes

NEW frocks for winter now show the influence of spring styles in line and bright color. There are numerous costumes shown in collections for Palm Beach that are suitable for stay-at-homes as well. These gayly colored dresses in plain silks and in prints are attractive when worn with fur town coats and hats either matched in color to the coats or the dresses.

TELLING THE WORLD

NOW GET THIS STRAIGHT

BEGINNING the New Year right——

To all life insurance agents: It's none of your damned business how much insurance we carry now. It's for us to decide if it's sufficient, not you.

We have often thought of what would happen to the wife and kiddies in case we dropped dead to-day. So don't bring that up again.

The interest on our insurance would not enable the family to live in the manner to which it is accustomed at present. If it did, we might as well be dead now.

And would you mind closing the door softly as you go out?

To all haberdashery clerks: If we come into your store to buy a shirt and a muffler, a shirt and a muffler are all we want. Just because we need a size 15 white broadcloth shirt doesn't mean we're not supplied with smoking jackets, lounging robes, collar buttons, leather hat cases, neckties, dress waistcoats and silk sox.

And an honest desire to buy one blue muffler does not signify we're all out of garters, umbrellas, cuff links, linen shorts, raincoats, silk top hats and colored suspenders.

Just wrap up what we ordered in the first place and that's all we need from you.

To all bond salesmen: We admit there is nothing like a batch of conservative bonds to stick away for middle or old age. The list you offer sounds pretty enticing and we would like nothing better than to purchase ten or a dozen of those bonds. But what are we going to use for money?

Sure, come around sometime later when we're a little better fixed. We've got a rich old uncle who is liable to drop off any day now. If you read his obituary, you can hustle right up here. Or if we win a $25,000 prize for solving Prohibition or insuring international peace, we'll certainly be in the market for bonds.

But in the mean time you'll save yourself a lot of time and conversation by tackling some one else. Goodby and good luck.

To all representatives of California grape companies: Yes, we are very fond of sauterne. But those unfermented juices you ship from California won't ferment into anything that's decent to drink. We know you've got a brand new process for making the wine jell just right, but that's what the last guy said—and we're saving the sauterne for next summer to sprinkle the lawn.

Good day, sir—and would you mind crossing us off your sucker list?

To all acquaintances who have the inside track: There is certainly nothing pleasanter than picking up a little piece of change on a tip. But this is a hell of a time to be offering us inside dope now.

That hunch you had on Consolidated Inkwell and International Can Opener at 54 ad 86 respectively was a pip—up to Oct. 26. There sure are a lot of good bargains lying around now, too, but we have still got blisters on our fingers from the last time we got burned.

We don't know anybody who'd be interested in a sure tip now except maybe J. P. Morgan—and he'd probably want to talk yachts. But if you hear of anything good in 1936 or 1937, that will be time enough to look us up.

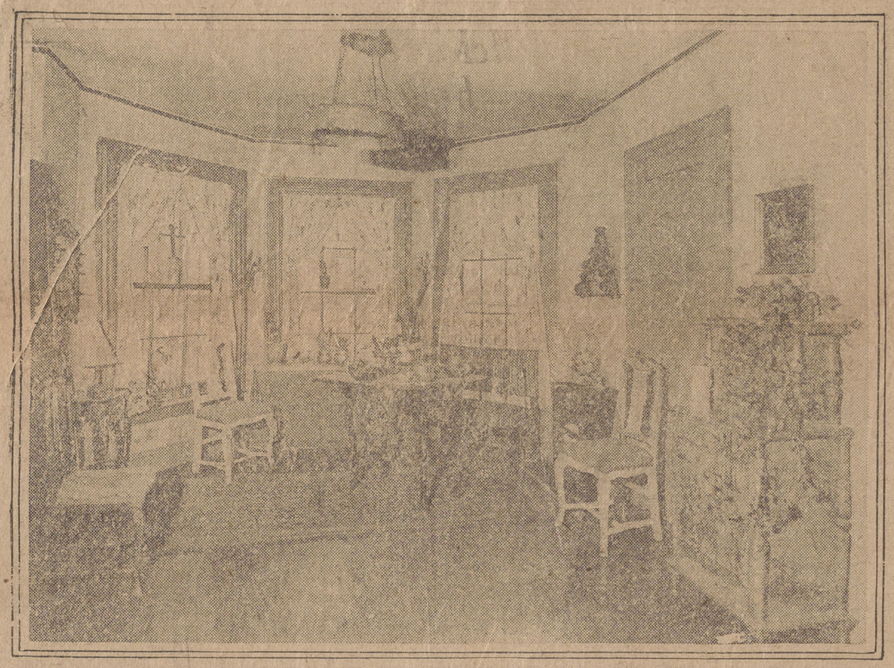
Beautiful Homes for Every Income

By Adeline De Voo



SURROUNDED BY CANARY WALLS, TURQUOISE WOODWORK AND GAY CHINTZ HANGINGS, BREAKFAST IN THIS ALCOVE IS ALWAYS A PLEASANT EVENT.

Cheer for the Breakfast Hour

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1929

WE may have restrained and impressive schemes for the living room—if we choose—and dignity in the dining room. But for the peace, good temper and general welfare of the family there must be simple, colorful surroundings at the hour for breakfast—or many days will start off wrong.

One of the first requisites for cheer, of course, is plenty of sunlight. The ideal breakfast table is always spread near a window where the sun can filter through. But if sunlight is lacking in your New York apartment, do not give up hope. Many perfectly adorable breakfast alcoves have been achieved in spite of court walls adjoining.

The answer to such a problem is invariably: Make the curtains at your windows, the colors and appointments inside your room, so suggestive of sunshine, of gardens and pleasure that the eye will not seek these qualities from the outside.

If you will look closely at the breakfast alcove photographed you will see beyond the chintz-clad windows the most forbidding row of cold brick walls. But so cheerful are the walls and woodwork, so gay the modern draperies, that one's first and last impression is one of extreme well-being, of a day well begun.

In determining the scheme for this corner we wanted first to plan a charming nook for breakfast; second, to show modern curtains with old French Provencal furniture which had been painted white.

The yellow of clear sunlight suggested itself for the painted walls, and turquoise blue for the woodwork. Then, since so much of the room's charm depended upon an attractive view of the windows from within, very serious thought was given to the choice of fabric to be used for the curtains. One modern fabric—a simple cotton chintz in a bird and basket design—was particularly appropriate in both color and pattern. On the white ground were just the right tones of turquoise and clear yellow with a little brown, a little orange, a little rose for accent. And this we chose for the three long windows, making the curtains with a pleated frill of plain turquoise, and draping them back at a piquant point half way between the upper sash.

The French bench in the alcove was upholstered in striped fabric in blue, yellow and pink and the seats of the white peasant chairs were upholstered in plain turquoise-colored fabric. The chest in the foreground was a delicious piece of furniture—no other word describes it, really. It was an old English piece painted a creamy yellow with Chinese figures in blue and gold which blended perfectly with our scheme. Over the chest the picture was a quaint under-glass painting of flowers in a black vase.

In addition to these pieces there was a little French peasant side table of walnut, and on it a pewter platter with a coffee set. The fringed cover shown on the breakfast table is not, as one might think, of yellow, blue or white, but of a lovely shade of pink, and on it the hostess used pale yellow cups and a brass kettle. The overhead light was a tole fixture painted pale yellow, and the peaked shade on the modern table lamp of black wood was once a Korean rain hat of pleated rice paper

Other interesting bits of decoration included the two hanging cabinets—the three-cornered one a modernized copy of an old Friesian piece on which were kept decorative objects of glass in harmony with the blue-green finish of the cabinet. The shelves on the opposite wall were built over a clever little French mirror framed in walnut—and on this rack stood beautiful egg cups and such small pieces.

With this collection of peasant pieces and chintz draperies we used a very handsome Oriental rug—which happened to carry just the right colors for the room. We might have argued with ourselves about this rug—debating its suitability in such a simple scheme—but it carried no very marked design; all colors—the blues, browns, yellows and pinks with a dash of black—were soft and subdued and it suited the scheme very well indeed.

This same question is often raised concerning the use of draperies such as chintz and linen in schemes where other furnishings are more or less elaborate. The very same chintz shown in to-day's setting I have seen treated elegantly, used in conjunction with silks in much more impressive rooms. Thus, too a spread of some charming cotton or linen fabric might be used in a bedroom where draperies and upholstering were of silken material. One must, of course, use judgment in these combinations. It is pattern, color, texture or surface which determine the fitness of different fabrics to be used together.

In writing week after week on different points of decoration it seems that two thoughts overbalance all others in my dissertations. I am conscious of a constant cry for light and color. It is almost impossible to restrain the impulse to plead for sheer, transparent fabrics through which the light may shine with an effect of sunlight; to beg readers to be more courageous in their use of color. Simple gauzes, tinted or shaded voiles at the windows of dark apartments are infinitely more pleasing than heavy draperies, however gorgeous. Painted woodwork and colorful walls that give life to the scheme instead of merely furnishing a neutral background, are certainly more inspiring than acres of dull beige and cream, however "safe."

I do not mind telling readers that these two hobbies were born of an experience in gloomy apartments. With no actual sunlight in the home the next best thing was simulated sunlight. I experimented with it and never again would live without the solace of color, the effect of light and air that can be achieved through a proper treatment of even the darkest room. One must not think that quality or grandeur can atone for the lack of these two qualities in decoration. Particularly in America we are so constituted that we must be surrounded by cheerful color, the sense of freedom that simplicity gives. It is in homes of this type that we are happiest. And if it is not possible to remodel the entire house along these lines at present we can at least commence with the breakfast alcove—the good morning of all our days.

Chevron Motifs

You may wear your one stripe, two stripes or three over your heart or on the front panel of a slip-on sweater, but it is not very effective on the sleeve. Heather mixtures, striped and plaided weaves are accented in color note by the chevron decoration, this theme sometimes repeated in the self belt.

George Creel Created Government Press Agent Evil Which Capital Correspondents of To-Day Despise —Cabinet Members Follow Practice

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The skeleton of the Government press agent will not subside. George Creel left Washington a legacy which every Cabinet officer embraces and every self-respecting or fairly diligent newspaper man despises.

With the possible exception of Secretary Akerson's skilful handling of White House news and McDermott's adroit methods as chief of the State Department's information bureau, governmental publicity is the resort of Federal officials desirous of exploiting themselves and the reliance of lazy "journalists" who pay $5 a week to old men on crutches or bright young office boys to collect a daily bale of useless information.

Creel came to Washington with a lot of good intentions. He persuaded Woodrow Wilson to put departmental Washington on a handout basis, clearing through a Jackson place office. It may have been a good thing during the prosecution of a war. It would have been intolerable under any circumstances except that Creel had the vision, the wit and the acquaintanceship to bring a lot of excellent newspaper men to his service.

War is one thing. Governmental propaganda is another.

It is a nice theory to have all official news issue from a central office. It is something else again to have officials of the Government gagged against giving information to newspaper men.

That is the situation we have in Washington to-day.

It is the bunk. Real newspaper men ignore departmental regulations. They go direct to original sources for their information. They cultivate their own acquaintances and all the departmental red-tape in the world does not keep an alert reporter out of a good story.

Vigilant reporters are not as abundant in Washington as they used to be nor as popular. Too many of them take the mimeographed "handouts" from Cabinet officers and bureau chiefs and are content to sponsor statements in print of what those officials wish to have printed instead of the whole story or some semblance of it.

GAVE RADIO ALIBI

I am told that a few nights ago, one of the most distinguished of the Washington correspondents descended to an alibi for his alleged "Hoover propaganda," in a radio speech. Knowing the man, I am amazed. He is reported to have said something to the effect that in return "for the personal affection Herbert Hoover has given to me he has not sought to purchase my mind."

The incident recalls another one.

When Arthur Krock, now with the New York Times, was promoted from the position of Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier Journal to a managing editor's desk, "Joe" Tumulty and half of the Wilson Cabinet wrote letters to Henry Watterson urging the appointment of L. Ames Brown to Krock's post.

"Marse Henry's" answer always has stuck in my mind.

"I don't know this man Brown," said old "Democracy unterrified and undefiled" in his decision picking Morton M. Milford for the job, "but if he is that thick with Cabinet officers that they try to plant him in a job I don't want him as my Washington correspondent. I never know when the Courier Journal may have to disagree with one of those gentlemen and I want a man who has no bias in sending facts to the readers of this newspaper."

Sad as it may seem, there are a lot of bootlickers among the newspaper men of Washington and the only satisfactory factor in that situation is that their number is growing less.

SEES CONGRESS ACTION

Previous references in the Day-by-Day column to Representative Cramton of Michigan for his petty little tyrannies as Chairman of some obscure appropriations subcommittee in the House, ought to establish the fact that I hold no brief for him.

Fairness does compel the statement that Mr. Cramton has put his finger on a problem with which Congress will have to deal sooner or later.

It is the problem of the "Governmental press agent." It is a phase of Washington life, which assumes an exaggerated importance among newspaper men who have ceased to be reporters.

No Washington correspondent who resigns from the press gallery to become a Senator's secretary at $3,000 a year or a special assistant to a Cabinet officer in charge of press relations at $3,500 to $5,000 a year, leaves any aching void in his job a "liar," a "faker" or a "fourthe gallery list.

Mr. Cramton wants to know, however, whether newpaper men so employed become press agents for the man who gives them the job. The answer is easy. They are just that and nothing more.

Never during my experience in Washington have I encountered a departmental "release to the press" in which the departmental information man called the Cabinet officer who gave him flusher."

That goes for Democratic and Republican Administrations alike. It is not surprising. It is human nature.

Therefore, Mr. Cramton is right when he contends that the American people get just what is favorable to the Cabinet officer involved. It is a fact, which no worth while Washington correspondent will dare to deny, that of such is made a lot of news put on the wires in the national capital every day and night.

CASE OF BILL DU PUY

Representative Cramton raises another point.

He wants to know how William Atherton Du Puy can be a magazine writer on topics touching Interior Department affairs and at the same time the special assistant to the Secretary of the Interior in charge of press releases.

I've known Bill Du Puy for years. He would not withhold a news item from any Washington reporter in order to sell it to a magazine for all the money in the world.

Du Puy could go down to the Interior Department and obtain all the material he desired for a magazine article, yet there is some point to Representative Cramton's contention that a departmental press agent ought not to appear in publications like the Saturday Evening Post, Good Housekeeping, World's Work and similar periodicals without any identification as an Interior Department publicity man.

Mr. Cramton contends that there is involved an issue of "dual personality" which it is difficult for him to understand. Mr. Du Puy insists that what he does as a magazine writer has nothing to do with his work at the Interior Department.

The Congressman from Michigan and the magazine writer had a merry row in the Appropriations Committee room of the House.

After reading the official report of the incident I incline anew to the belief that the governmental publicity man is the salvation of the lazy Washington correspondent and the stumbling block of the alert Washington reporter.

The Farmer's Advice

By Alfalfa Smith

IN THAT excellent book of Alfred Adler called "Understanding Human Nature," we find when he speaks of the competition between the children in the same home: "The situation of an only boy among several girls is a case in point. A feminine influence dominates such a household and the boy is pushed into the background particularly if he is the youngest, and sees himself opposed by a phalanx of women. His striving for recognition encounters great difficulties. Threatened on all sides, he never senses with certainty the privilege which in our retarded masculine civilization is given to every male."

In this simple statement of Dr. Adler you may possibly find the solution of your own problem, or you may find one of the answers to this all absorbing question: WHAT MAKES CRIMINALS?

It Is Said—

Frequent gargling with a solution of cider vinegar (a glassful) and salt (a spoonful) will quickly relieve a sore throat.

White woolly toys can be cleaned by rubbing with a paste made of starch brought to a creamy consistency with cold water. When dry brush the toy and it will be clean.

Vinegar will remove the glue that got on the furniture while you were using it.

A little cold tea mixed with warm water is excellent for washing stained woodwork—use a soft woolen cloth.

Ricks Hearing Started At County Seat

MARTINEZ, Jan. 17.—UP—"Trial" of C. A. "Cappy" Ricks, local realtor before Fred Athearn former California corporation commissioner appointed by Gov. C. C. Young to hear Ricks' application for a 1930 broker's license, revolved itself into an issue over the honesty of Ricks.

Denied a 1929 realtor's license and a 1930 broker's license by Stephen Barnson, state real estate commissioner, Ricks appealed the case and the rehearing was ordered. Governor Young appointed Athearn to hear the case.

A. F. Bray, attorney for Ricks charged today that a "political setup" brought about the rehearing of Rick's application.

Bray, however, made it plain that his charges of politics are not to be construed as applicable to Athearn and declared that he referred to "the machinery that brought about the reopening of the case."

Bray entered a formal protest that the real estate act does not provide machinery that allows appointment of a special commissioner and introduced all of his testimony subject to this objection of no jurisdiction.

Bray said that his statement referred to reported action of Governor Young ordering the rehearing and appointing Athearn as special commissioner reputedly without consulting Barnson.

At Athearn's suggestion there was eliminated from the record the original complaints against Ricks of unethical conduct and testimony was limited to Ricks' reputation for honesty and fairness in business dealings.

Thomas R. Hanna, of Martinez T. D. Johnston, L. O. McCormack of Oakland, and R. H. Wright, were called to the stand and all asserted that Ricks' reputation has been good.

The hearing was enlivened during the noon hour recess by an alleged fist fight between Ricks and R. E. Goree, another realtor. The brawl was reported to have entangled several spectators, including George Eddy, a realtor and whose complaint against Ricks has caused the hearing.

Friends separated the "battlers" before much damage could be done.

El Cerrito Lion Club Hears Fire Prevention Talk

Fire prevention was the subject of a talk given yesterday at the El Cerrito Lions club by Capt. Arthur Higgs of the Berkeley fire department.

Higgs advocated a system of prevention of carelessness now being used in many European countries and several states of this country. Under this provision, the owner of the home destroyed by fire is arrested. If he is found to blame, he must pay for the cost of extinguishing the fire.

Reports on the recent meeting of the Golden Gate Lions council were given by Blake McNeill and John Grondona. A musical number was offered by Steve Barton and McNeili. Louis Davis was chairman of yesterday's meeting.

NOTED ACTORS IN THRILL TALKIE

Ben Hecht, famous mystery writer, and Lionel Barrymore, latest directorial genius of the talking screen, get together in what is the most sensational screen mystery drama of the season. This is "The Unholy Night" Metro Goldwyn Mayer's new thriller now playing at the Fox-California theater, as an all talking production.

With a huge cast of noted actors with spiritualistic seances, weird apparitions, and strange criminals lurking in fantastic shadows or the wreaths of a London fog, the new story is fairly crammed with thrills, and Barrymore's direction gets out of it the maximum of dramatic effect.

The cast is a notable one, including Ernest Torrence as the mysterious "Dr. Ballou" and Roland Young as "Lord Monty" whimsical leader of a group of British officers menaced by the strangest enemy the brain of a playwright ever conceived.

Dorothy Sebastian triumphs in a new type of role as "Efra" the mysterious woman of the picture, as does also Natalie Moorhead, blonde beauty of the stage, as "Lady Vi" the British peeress enmeshed in the plot.

Claude Fleming, John Miljan, John Loder, Richard Tucker, Lionel Belmore, Sojin, George Cooper, Polly Moran, Phillip Strange, John Roche, Clarence Geldert, Gerald Barry and others of note round out a specially elaborate cast in the new play.

The thrills include the materialization of a ghost at an uncanny seance, a weird murder in the shadows of an old manor house, a cataleptic mystery and other sensational bits of action.

STATE REALTY HEAD STARTS ON TOUR

Presenting an accurate picture of present and potential industrial opportunities in each community he visits, W. H. Daum, president of the California Real Estate association, is devoting January and February to visiting the real estate boards of the state since his inauguration, he has visited the boards of Alhambra, Long Beach, Anaheim, Laguna Beach, a district meeting at Burbank, and attended the Los Angeles Realty board annual banquet. Immediately following his election he visited a number of real estate boards.

On Jan. 19, he will leave for Phoenix to attend the midwinter meeting of the National association. Returning, he will spend the next month in the central and northern parts of the state. With a schedule calling for single board meetings and joint meetings, he will address members of the follow boards: Bakersfield, Fresno, Merced, Modesto, Tracy, Stockton, Lodi, Marysville, Sacramento, Sacramente, Woodland, Vallejo, Napa, Richmond, Contra Costa, Alameda, Berkeley, San Leandro, San Francisco, Redwood City, Burlingame-San Mateo, Marin county, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg, Petaluma, Santa Cruz, Watsonville San Jose, Gilroy, and San Benito county.

"Industrial mindedness,' which the industrial division of the California Real Estate association has been preaching through all these years," says President Daum, "has awakened many a California citizen to the progress possible and available throughout this great state long industrial and commercial lines of endeavor, and in turn what this development means in the production of wealth, comfort and happiness for every other line of endeavor in the state, and for its entire citizenship."

Rev. Heneghan To Be Transferred

PAINFUL CORNS
Loosen—Lift Out

A little known Japanese herb, the discovery of an eminent German scientist (Dr. Stickel) instantly soothes the corn, callous or wart, then loosens it so that shortly you can lift it right out. This new discovery called "Corn Fly" excites the white blood corpuscles to action and granulates the corn at its root so that it drops out and leaves no trace of scar or soreness.

You will also find "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" a boon for sore, tired or perspiring feet.

TEACHERS WILL BE AIDED BY NEW ACT

SACRAMENTO. —UP— Every school teacher in Richmond will be affected by the new teachers' retirement salary act being prepared for introduction at the 1931 session of the state legislature.

Defeated by the narrow margin of one vote, the bill providing for a larger teachers' pension had a hectic experience in the last legislature. Its author, Senator George W. Rochester of Los Angeles, who put through California's famous 'gin marriage' act, is getting the new retirement bill in shape for another effort to put it across, he said on a visit here this week.

"The 1931 legislature is only 13 months away, so it isn't too early to be thinking about these things," said Rochester.

Scheme Lauded

"Public opinion in California is demanding a better system of paying teachers who are retired. The teachers themselves are entitled to more than the measly $500 a year under the present law. I am certain this new measure will be adopted in 1931, because we learned a lot of things about the opposition to it in the last legislature."

The bill lost in committee by one vote, Rochester recalled. After several amendments, it had passed the senate. In the assembly it was sent to the ways and means committee. Rochester needed nine votes to get it out with a "do pass' recommendation. He had the nine votes, but one committeeman, Assemblyman Harry Morrison of San Francisco, was absent when the vote was taken. It went to the floor "without recommendation."

Many Benefits

Every public school teacher in the state would come under the new law. A teacher who has served 35 years would be compelled to retire and receive a salary of $1080 a year provided she has taught the last 10 years in California, and not more than 15 years outside the state.

The new retirement act is based on service of 35 years. If, however, a teacher wishes to retire at the end of 30 years' service she may do so and receive proportionate retirement salary.

The proposed law would also be in the nature of health and accident insurance for teachers. For retirement because of ill health or physical disability would entitle a qualified teacher to the same fraction of $1080 a year as her total service is of 35 years.

Are you a social lion? Are you a brilliant conversationalist? If not follow these rules at any social gathering, and every one will remember you when they get home.

1. Talk about yourself. Other people know all about themselves and are impatient to hear you talk.

2. Get rid of your appendix, your tonsils or teeth. Everyone likes to hear about such experiences.

3. Mimic and exaggerate all mistakes in English, except your own. You will keep the party in an uproar.

4. Talk on any subject. If you don't know what you are referring to, insist you are right anyway.

5. Always remember to be versatile. If others get a chance to introduce topics, tell them all about them.

6. Above all, don't argue. It takes two people to make an argument. Cover each subject thoroughly yourself and then drop it for the evening. The mind likes variety.

7. Always be square. If you know anything embarassing about anyone present, expose him on the spot. Don't wait until he has gone and talk behind his back.

8. Shout if necessary. When anyone tries to monopolize the conversation but yourself, drown him out.

9. If by any chance he can shout louder than yourself, shut him up with questions. Remember the ancient proverb, "A fool can ask more questions in a minute than a wise man can answer in a lifetime."

NEWS CLASSES URGED BY TEACHER

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 17—(U.P.)—Classes in newspaper reading should be established in California's public schools, according to a recommendation by Roy L. French, professor of journalism at the University of Southern California, to the state department of education.

"Newspapers are the most vital source of important public information today," said French. "They are better than ever before, giving more news and giving it more accurately. There's no substitute for a newspaper. Public speeches, the radio, moving pictures and magazines cannot take its place.

"Have you ever asked yourself these things: How would you decide to vote without the information given by your newspaper? Having voted, how would you know who had been elected? How would you test the records of public officials? How would you know about new laws and whether the law is being enforced without the newspapers?

"The adult is not trained for intelligent newspaper reading. He doesn't appreciate what a mine of succinct and vital information is his to read either at home or on the streetcar. Let us not hamper our school children by leaving them with this same lack of training."

Investment In State Real Estate Urged

Investment in California Real estate is urged by Hal G. Hotchkiss, past president of the California Real Estate association. That those who have consistently invested in California property have made large profits, and that values will be enhanced with the constantly increasing population, is the contention of his realtor, who is president of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce.

"In any city in this state," he said, "can be pointed out many examples of increased value in real property over a period of years. Real estae is substantial, solid, and is a real asset to its owner."

LICENSES FOR REALTORS DENIED

December orders for revocation and denial of real estate licenses were based largely on misrepresentation, according to a report of the State Real Estate department to the California Real Estate association.

Licenses of two salesmen in the employ of the same firm, were revoked because they represented to the complainant that if she would purchase a certain lot and pay $2,000 thereon that they would sell the property at a profit of $1,500 before any payment became due. According to the commissioner's decision this promise was false and with no intention to perform.

A broker's license was revoked because he induced the complainant to purchase property making a cash payment of $120 thereon and assigning a certain agreement of sale covering purchase of a lot on which complainant had paid $300, crediting same on the new property on the representation and promise of the broker that complainant would not be called upon to make any further payments required by the agreement of sale, but the evidence disclosed that he was called upon to pay the balance due under the agreement of sale and that the broker failed and refused to assume any liability.

Salesman's license was denied applicant who had induced an aged person to mortgage her home to purchase a certain chicken unit which was to be supplied with a number of hens and capons to be delivered within a certain time, and that the income from the capons would be sufficient to retire at least half of the mortgage in less than a year, all of which representations were found to be false.

Salesman's license was revoked on complaint that the salesman had represented certain street improvements would be made and also on promise of a resale. A broker's license was revoked on complaint that the broker concealed from the complainant material facts concerning the sale of property, which facts, if known would have afforded the complainant the opportunity of purchasing at a price less than he paid.

Agriculture Law Necessary As Others To State

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 16.—UP—If a thug "sticks you up" and takes your pocketbook he may be arrested and sent to prison.

If a man throws a lighted cigarette out of his automobile or leaves a campfire burning and sets a forest afire he may be fined or sent to jail.

But if a traveler knowingly violates California's plant quarantine laws he isn't "given the limit" even though he endangers the property of others just as much as the thug or the incendiary.

Which gives rise to the question propounded by George H. Hecke, California's director of agriculture: "Should more drastic penalties be given violators of the state's agricultural quarantine laws?"

"In the enforcement of the prohibition law," says Hecke, "such wide publicity has been given to the subject of carrying contraband liquor that were a traveler halted and liquor he was carrying confiscated, he would not be at all surprised if authorities administered severe punishment. The same holds true for persons who set forests or grain fields afire.

But the hazards attendent on transportation of fruits and vegetables, in its relation to the best interests of the country—to the protection of our national income, reduction of our cost of living and the cost of production—hasn't yet become part of our national consciousness.

Tourists who leave an eastern state for the west, Hecke said, take along some of their home fruits to show their friends or consume along the way. That they may be party to spreading the deadly Mediterranean fruit fly, the Japanese beetle, the San Jose scale or some other undesirable pest is furthest from their thoughts.

"There have been requests that California actually undertake to inspect each piece of baggage coming into the state by train, automobile or steamship," Hecke continued. "This is now being done with respect to automobile traffic, since there is more incentive for motor tourists to carry fruit picked up enroute. But interference with the personal liberty of travelers can be carried only to a reasonable point.

"When the national consciousness becomes alive to the protection that should be afforded agriculture by all our citizens, the difficulties in border inspection, train inspection and other lines of regulative work in California will be recognized as an established part of our national agricultural program. Then restrictions placed upon travelers will be accepted with better grace."

THREE SAVED FROM GAS FUMES

PITTSBURG, Jan. 17.—UP—Three men, all Filipinos, are today recovering from the effects of gas, which coming from an unvented heater nearly claimed their lives last night.

They are: Phillip Bocata, 36, employe of the Booth cannery here; Ramon Intog, 27, and Tematio Torres, 25, both employes of the Columbia Steel company.

The men, all in a near state of asphyxiation, were found in a house here by Pete Spinoza, a neighbor.

Spinoza, braving the fumes, threw open the doors and windows in the house, and dragged Bocato and Intog outside.

Bocato, who recovered when he was dragged into the fresh air, told Spinoza that another man was in the house.

Once again braving the deadly fumes, Spinoza searched the house until he found Torres in the bathtub, unconcious.

Spinoza carried Torres outside and then telephoned Dr. H. E. Peters.

Artificial respiration and stimulants were used to return the men to consciousness.

Dr. Peters today pronounced the men out of danger, but stated that if they had remained in the room a few minutes longer, death undoubtedly would have resulted.

Following disclosure of the near fatalities, it was revealed that Myles Gahan, district manager of the Coast Counties Gas and Electric company had already approached Pittsburg council members in an attempt to urge passage of an ordinance prohibiting installation of gas appliances that are not properly vented.

Purser, Student Of Two Colleges

STOCKTON, Jan. 17.—UP—Fred Spooner, Stockton youth who is purser on a steamboat plying between this city and San Francisco, is a student in two colleges—University of California and College of the Pacific.

Spooners' steamboat run leaves him in San Francisco on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, so he attends the university on those days. But when he lays over in Stockton on Tuesday and Thursday he goes to the College of the Pacific. He does most of his studying on the boat at night after work.

MIDDLE WEST HIT BY NEW COLD WAVE

the drop was expected to continue to 15 or 18 degrees below.

Minneapolis, Duluth and intervening points reported readings as low as 30 below.

Communications were paralyzed during most of the night. All of the transcontinental wires were down for three hours.

The wave swept on down the Mississippi valley, into Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Texas. One of the worst blizzards in history was reported in northwest Texas, where the mercury dropped to eight below zero.

In the far northwest the Columbia river was reported entirely frozen over, and Portland reported it was 13 below zero. A record low of 57 below zero was reported at Bear Valley, Ore.

57 DEGREES BELOW ZERO IN NORTHWEST

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 17—(U.P.)—Howling gales today added to the discomforts of one of the Pacific northwest's most prolonged and severe cold spells.

Portland was raked by high winds and experienced a minimum of 13 degrees—the lowest temperature since January, 1927.

Transportation along the Willamette and Columbia rivers was at a practical standstill. The Columbia river is completely frozen over at Vancouver, Wash., with ice piled around the interstate bridge piers. The stern wheeler, N. R. Lang, was frozen in six miles above Vancouver. She carries a $30,000 cargo of paper.

The steamer Robert Young was ordered down from Oregon City to break ice in the Willamette, but after proceeding through the locks, she became frozen in near Jennings Lodge. All the ice-bound crafts are said to have provisions for a week.

Gales tore down communication systems, uprooted trees and interrupted travel in various parts of the Pacific northwest. Falling trees impaired train and telegraph service through southern Oregon.

Numerous fires and accidents were reported over Washington and Oregon. All were attributed to the cold wave.

Bear Valley, near Seneca, Ore., was the coldest spot in the northwest with a minimum of 57 degrees below zero. Burns, Ore., reported 40 below. Other sub-zero points were Pendleton, Baker, The Dalles, Prineville, Bend, Walla Walla, Canyon City and Hood River.

BLIZZARD SWEEPS SOUTHWESTERN STATES

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 17—(U.P.)—Blizzards and extreme cold—in some places reaching record bitterness—assumed serious proportions in the southwest tonight.

Temperatures receded to zero and below, bringing suffering to the poor. The cold made more biting by winter breezes and fresh snow flurries on top of a week of snow, prevailed as far south as the Texas Panhandle.

Oklahoma and Texas, normally unprepared for real winter, reported the most acute cold in the past 12 years.

At Oklohoma City several women were carried away from the street car terminal in stretchers after they had stood for long periods waiting for paralyzed transportation.

Work in the oil fields was at a standstill.

Mob Threatens Attack Suspect

EL CENTRO, Jan. 137.—UP—Threats by a mob of several hundred persons in Brawley caused Augustino Pone, asserted attacker of a nine-year-old girl to be brought to the county jail late today for safe keeping.

Pone was said to have been positively identified as the man who assaulted the daughter of a Mexican physician in Brawley Monday, holding her all night. A crowd here surrounded the car in which Pone, intoxicated, was brought to El Centro but offered no violence.

JAN. 31 LAST DAY TO GET LICENSES

Motorists driving cars with 1929 license plates are operating their cars in violation of the law. They have until Jan. 31 to secure new 1930 license plates without paying the penalty of a doubled fee.

This was the warning issued yesterday by the California State Automobile association which is continuing to issue plates from its offices in San Francisco, Oakland and thirty other cities. State Division of Motor Vehicle offices are also continuing to issue plates.

George S. Grant, in charge of the Automibile association license renewal service, yesterday explained the state law provisions which contain the apparent paradox of a license period officially closed yet permitting motorists to renew registration without penalty for fifteen days thereafter.

30-Day Period

"The law provides for a thirty-day renewal registration period," said Grant, "which opened Dec. 15 last and therefore closed this year on Jan. 15.

"The law provides that those who have not secured plates or applied for same within the thirty day period, are subject to arrest and fine for misdemeanor violation of this provision.

"But the law also provides that the penalty of a doubled fee for failure to secure or apply for new licence plates for the calendar year shall not become effective until after midnight, Jan. 31.

Short Time

"Thus motorists who have not yet renewed their registration are in violation of the law and subject to citation and fine but they have the fifteen day period from Jan. 15 to 31 within which to comply with the law and escape the automatic penalty of a doubled registration fee.

"Therefore there is a period of grace now running within which motorists may escape automatic penalty, even though they may not escape a citation from traffic officers. During this period until midnight Jan. 31, motorists who have not received their plates may satisfy officers by displaying evidence, such as a temporary receipt, of having applied for renewal registration."

HIGH SCHOOL MAY REMAIN IN ATHLETIC LEAGUE

LOCAL SCHOOL AWAITS LOOP RULING

Richmond will remain in the California Interscholastic Federation until it is notified otherwise, Principal B. X. Tucker of the Richmond Union High school stated last night.

Richmond has a league game scheduled with Alameda Tuesday afternoon at the high school gymnasium. The game will be played, unless officials of the C. I. F. give notice that the local school has been dropped from the league.

The tangle arose Thursday night when four Richmond boys, former students at the local high school were accused of taking four electrolier globes from the Hayward school during the Hayward-Richmond basketball game.

Ruling Told

Under the rules of the C. I. F. any act of vandalism on the part of pupils, players or friends of a school results in the immediate dismissal of the school from the league.

Last night the four boys said to have been responsible for the act met with Principal Frederick P. Johnson of Hayward Union high school and agreed to pay all damages.

What effect this might make in the case was not apparent last night.

League Silent

Johnson refused to state whether or not a report of the affair would be made to the league.

No word was sent to the local school by the C. I. F. officials as to what action might be taken on the matter.

Tucker stated yesterday that in light of the league ruling against vandalism and its penalty Richmond could do nothing more than accept the results of the league rule that Richmond will be ineligible.

Actions Scored

Tucker's remarks were echoed by Ivan W. Hill, athletic instructor at the local hgh school.

Pupile at the local school were general in their condemnation of the actions of the four boys.

Y. M. D. Cagers Play San Jose Team Tonight

The Richmond Y. M. D. cagers will journey to San Jose tonight, where they will tangle with the San Jose Y. M. D. quintet in the San Jose Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Both teams are in the northern California Y. M. D. basketball league.

There ought to be plenty of excitement at San Jose tonight, for both squads have been outstanding in their separate districts in past years. Boasting such speedy players as Tony Santaella, Bill Fowell, Willie Hillier, L. Johnson, Livermore, and Clarence Brown, the local squad ought to fare well in tonight's clash.

OLYMPIAD WILL BE BIG EVENT FOR WEST

The International Olympic games will be held in California during 1932, and already plans are under way to entertain many national conventions in the west. One of these gatherings will be the American Title Association, which will convene at Del Monte during the summer of that year. This will bring a thousand title men to California from all over the world. Donzel Stoney, president of this nation wide organization, is a native of California, and was instrumental in bringing the national meeting to this state for the Olympic year.

The National association of Real Estate Boards, will, it is stated, plan to hold its annual convention in Los Angeles during 1932, and according to plans now being considered by Realtors this gathering would be held during the spring time, when the Golden West is in its best attire for the reception of visitors.

The National Real Estate convention has come thrice to the Pacific coast, the first time at Los Angeles during the Panama Pacific exposition year; the second at San Francisco in 1922, and the third time at Seattle in 1927. Col. William May Garland, chairman of the international Olympiad, is a past president of the National association. Harry H. Culver, a past president of the California Real Estate association, is just completing his eventful term as national president.

The California Real Estate association, made up of members in over 200 cities throughout the state, will cooperate with the Los Angeles Realtors in entertaining the large eastern states.

CARD CAGERS BEAT TROJANS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—UP—The Stanford Cardinals defeated the University of Southern California basketball team here tonight 35 to 23. The Trojans were outclassed even more than the score would indicate, being run off their feet by the speedy Cardinals.

The score at half time was 21 to 11. Fawcett led the Cardinal attack and scored 12 points. Rothert and Rowley did a thorough job of breaking up the Trojan defense.

RICHMOND Y.L.I. HOOP STARS BEAT NOELS

Members of the Richmond Y. L. I. basketball team, defeated Noel institute of Oakland at the Oakland Technical high school girl's gymnasium by a score of 28-7 last night.

Members of the team who played in last night's game are: Cecilia Desmond, Irma Chattelton, Alice Maloney, Louise Novarini, Mary Gately, Agnes Campbell and Helen Gately.

The victors will play Oakland Y. L. I. No. 15 in the Tech gym next Wednesday night, and expect to continue their winning streak.

1929 Deer Tags Less Than 1928

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 17—(U.P.)—Deer tags for the 1929 season totaled 21,218, which is 297 less than were turned in for the 1928 season, according to a report of the fish and game commission.

Mendocino county had 1,355 tags, leading the list of counties. Siskiyou county was first in 1928, with 1654 tags, but fell to second place in 1929 with but 1211. Lake county was third with 841 tags.

Los Angeles county turned in 691 tags, while San Francisco and Sacramento counties were the only two in the state to report none.

St. Helena To Get Natural Gas

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—UP—The State Railroad commission today received a petition from the Natural Gas corporation of California for a certificate to furnish natural gas for the city of St. Helena.

The hearing will be held in the state building here Feb. 25.

The decision given by the commission will settle a controversy of long standing between the Pacific Gas and Electric company and the Natural Gas corporation. The P. G. & E. has also announced its plans for serving the district of St. Helena. Gas has not been available in the city of St. Helena for some years, it was reported to the commission.

Representatives of both gas companies will be present at the hearing here next month, the commission said.

FARM PRODUCTS TO BE SEEN AT SHOW

One of the most impressive displays of farm products and land features ever made in this state will be assembled at the California land show, Los Angeles, March 8-23 by the Miller and Lux corporation, largest owner of acreage in the west. It will be in charge of Alfred L. Clarke, head of the exploitation department of the corporation.

Frank G. Mitchell, southern division sales manager for the corporation, arranged for the space with the Los Angeles Realty Board, sponsors of the land show.

"Congratulations are due the realtors for arranging this show" he said. "It is being held just at the right time. It is needed and will doubtless be a fine success. As soon as we learned of it we wished to participate. We have been in every other land show held in the west and have found, it profitable to exhibit. We look for this to be the superior of all, in scope, usefulness and attendance."

The California Real Estate association, whose members have been working in all sections of the state for the success of the show, adopted a resolution at its annual meeting in Los Angeles commending the board for sponsoring the show and for the successful progress made to date. It called on all its members to continue their aid.

San Mateo is one of the latest counties to take space. A gilded basket five feet in length, will be filled daily with flowers airplaned from San Mateo, typifying the $7,000,000 annual sales of flowers.

San Luis Obispo county has also selected a space. Butte, Fresno and Placer counties are arranging their exhibits.

mained stationary for several hours and then began to recede.

Hastily reinforced levees protecting the city held despite the tremendous pressure against them and officials said there was no further danger except from possible water contamination.

Homes Ruined

The picture in the interlands was not so cheerful. More than 100,000 acres were under water, hundreds of homes were ruined and many families which waited too long to flee the yellow torrents were reported marooned without food or fuel in the upper floors of their houses.

A Red Cross representative flew at a low altitude over the vast area of desolation, spotting the trapped families so that aid could be sent to them by boat.

A Chicago and Eastern Illinois work train, sloshing through the water five miles north of Vincennes, was halted when the overflow suddenly rose high enough to quench the fire in the engine.

Boats put out to rescue the crew.

Families Flee

Temperatures sank to five degrees above zero. Heavy snow accompanied the falling temperatures and added to the discomfort of refugees particularly in Knox county where more than 300 families were forced to abandon their homes.

Similar condition sprevailed in eastern Illinois, Arkansas and western Tennessee and Mississippi.

The floods spread over some 200,000 acres of low and marsh lands in eastern Arkansas. Thousands of acres of cotton remaining in the fields of the rich Mississippi county delta were ruined when a levee crumbled 20 miles west of Blytheville.

Prison Rioter Sings As He Goes To Death

FOLSOM PRISON, Jan. 17.—UP—With a song to his mother on his lips, Gene Crosby, the curly haired "singing convict" of the Folsom prison riot gang, went to his death on the scaffold here today.

The youthful war veteran, who, his comrades said, "kept still because he didn't want to queer us," faced death with a smile. But in his cell he left a poem, penned during the hours he faced death, that will be kept as a priceless heritage by his aged mother in Nebraska.

Crosby kept his smile to the last. As Warden Court Smith visited his cell to escort the doomed man on the last march, the youth held out his hand and said:

Shakes Hand

"Shake warden, I'm not going to break down."

Crosby's poems were always religious in nature, although he refused the consolation of the prison priest. This, according to prison officials, was merely carrying out his part of a pact made with the four rioters who preceded him to a noose, that none of them would accept spiritual consolation.

Clouds hid the sun until the hour of his execution. Just as the hour for the execution arose, the sun streamed through the barred windows of the death house. The shadow of the noose danced on the white-washed walls for a moment, then disappeared, only to reappear on the wall.

Warden Smith, a towering figure, appeared more shaken by today's death rite than ever before. Crosby was held by officials to be least responsible for the riot that cost the lives of 11 convicts and two guards on Thanksgiving Day, 1927.

Hearse Waited

Outside the prison walls, a hearse awaited to take the body to San Francisco, where he will be buried in the military ground at the Presideo. One of his last wishes was that he not be buried in the prison cemetery.

Soon after the hanging was over, the rickety portable scaffold at Folsom prison was dismantled. Then Albert M. Stewart of Los Angeles, "the squealer" was removed from his cell in the "back alley" to murderers' row in the death chamber.

Today Stewart made a plea by letter to Superior Judge Malcolm C. Glenn of Sacramento, that he be sentenced to death as soon as possible. "Anything is preferable," wrote Stewart, "to this living death I am now passing through. If anything can be done to speed this thing along, I wish you would do it."

"Squealer" To Die

Judge Glenn replied that the only action that Stewart could take to speed his death would be withdrawal of his appeal from the death penalty now before the supreme court.

Prison officials declared that even if Stewart's sentence were regarded commuted, he would live in constant terror of his life. How he would be regarded by fellow convicts, they said, was best expressed in another verse left by the late Crosby:

"Judas betrayed Christ, the Master.
Then hanged himself in abject shame,
If Stewart had an ounce of courage,
He would, in honor, do the same."

Liver, Gall Bladder and Stomach Trouble Relieved

2946 Morgan Ave.
Oakland, Cal.
Nov. 19, 1929.

THE FONG WAN HERB CO.

Dear Mr. Fong—I am writing this letter to express my gratitude for the splendid results and benefits I have received from the use of the Chinese Herbs prepared by you.

I had a complication of Liver, Gall-Bladder and Stomach Trouble with sharp, stabbing pains in the lower right side of my Abdomen. The region of the Liver was exceedingly sore and tender; so much so that even loose clothing became irritating and uncomfortable. My Stomach was also very sore to the touch and felt as if there were a lump the size of an egg in it. After meals, food which was very sour and burned the throat, was returned to the mouth.

This condition steadily became worse over a period of a year. During this time, I was treated by two doctors without any appreciable results. Both decided that an operation was necessary.

By good fortune, I came into contact with a man whom you had treated successfully for an Ulcerated Stomach, and he strongly urged me to take your treatment. This I did.

Results were noticeable the very first week, and now, after six weeks, I am entirely free from the terrible stabbing pains and the soreness over my Liver. My digestion is good. The old feeling of lassitude has completely disappeared and I feel much brighter and more energetic than I have for years.

I am most happy to strongly recommend the herbs of the Fong Wan Herb Co. as prepared by you.

Wishing you unbounded success, and again thanking you for what you have done for me, I am
Very cordially yours,
CYRIL MAW.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said:

"One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."

Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

"GENERAL CRACK"
BY GEORGE PREEDY

Copyright 1928 by Dodd Mead & Co., Inc.

The Warner Bros. & Vitaphone production starring John Barrymore, is based on this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Lovely Princess Eleanora is the decisive pawn in the game of diplomacy which will decide whether King Leopold is to be Emperor or merely a figurehead. He has offered General Crack, soldier of fortune, the hand of his sister the Archduchess, as dowry, if he will take his side. Crack has refused, bent on marrying Eleanora. At a crucial interview, attended by both suitors, Anhalt-Dessau decides in favor of Leopold, and Crack retires. Count Hensdorff, the king's adviser, urges Leopold to yield his claim in favor of Crack.

But the keen, inquisitive gaze of Hensdorff, his tormentor, nerved him; he made an effort to control his confusion, his fear of, and repugnance to, his task.

"I will," he declared, "see this man myself. Ask him to come here, now—I must overlook his insolence—"

"Ask whom, Sire?"

"This General Crack—ask him to come."

In half an hour Christian was there, facing Leopold in the small anteroom to the bedchamber that had been given him in the Château Schönbuchel.

"We have come, Highness," the Bavarian said with dignity, "to a point when we do not need a go-

He could not endure to lose her!

between. What there is to settle, we can settle ourselves."

"No doubt," answered Christian "It is, Sire, one to me who settles the matter. But it must be today that it is settled."

"Doubtless," replied Leopold tolerating him with an effort, "you know how I am pressed. And my advisers think you are the man I need."

"Sire, I have heard all this from Count Hensdorff and gave him my answer."

"Not too civilly, I think," said Leopold, firing up. "By Heaven, Monseigneur, you make it difficult for me!"

"Circumstance, not I, makes the difficulty," remarked Christian unmoved. "It is not easy to beg favors of one, Sire, you dislike—"

"I have not disliked you," protested Leopold.

"You have disregarded me," replied Christian. "You do not willingly turn to me now; you may as well, Sire, have matters clear—"

"And you as well keep courteous," interrupted Leopold haughtily.

"Remembering that I speak to Caesar? But it is not my courtesy you want to buy, Sire."

"No," replied Leopold, mustering all his patience. "I bargain with you for your sword, Highness. If you will take command of all my forces—"

"I want Anhalt-Dessau's daughter," said Christian, coldly. "I go neither up nor down from that demand."

"I will not give it," replied Leopold, with a shuddering resolution.

"Then I daresay that we shall meet on the battlefield, Sire, for I go at once to join the Queen of Hungary's husband."

"Why are you so set on this lady?" he asked.

"Why are you so set on withholding her?" counter-demanded Christian.

"Anhalt-Dessau has already refused her to you—"

"He will withdraw that refusal if you bid him—when Caesar is out of the lists. General Crack may be good enough."

Leopold looked away, out of the window, to refresh himself by that exquisite expanse of sunny landscape, and to be rid of the sight of that cold showy face General Crack bent on him.

"I," continued the implacable soldier, "am no more eager to serve under you, Sire, than you are eager to employ me. But since I must set some man up, it may as well be you if you will pay my price."

"Any price but the price you ask—"

"You have nothing else to offer that I care about," smiled Christian. "Neither your honors, Sire, nor your sister tempt me."

This was too much for Leopold; he threw down the dispatches into the window seat.

"Then you must go," he declared hotly, "for I see we can conclude no business."

"Shall I tell Count Hensdorff so?" asked Christian mockingly. "Come, Sire, do not make all this delay and question. I do not ask what you should grudge."

The words made Leopold ashamed of the weight he had given to his own speech; he felt insignificant before the other's irony; this time yesterday he had not seen her—a girl in a wood! he might so soon forget; he felt exhausted by his own effort at strength and resolution.

Count Hensdorff and Father St. Nikola (who had accompanied the dispatch rider) entered showing grave faces: neither of them had trusted Leopold to bring this momentous interview to a satisfactory climax. At sight of them Leopold felt himself hemmed in, forced, overwhelmed as usual when they together bore down on him.

He sank in the window seat and put a trembling hand to his forehead. He thought, "She was destined for me, she was almost mine, and they will take her away."

"His Imperial Majesty," said Christian, "refuses my terms."

At that, Leopold heard the two others, minister and priest, talking together; harshly, impatiently, persuading him, reproaching him, pelting him with State arguments till his head ached and his heart sickened.

And what had he to oppose to all this wisdom?

A few moments in a wood at sunset.

His two tormentors persisted, to the limit of the endurance of his nerves; they seemed to him to be bearing down on him, enclosing him with their dark figures, their old, harsh faces, their insistent voices; and, worse than them even, he was conscious of General Crack, silent, assured, waiting with the sleek patience of a beast certain of its prey.

After half an hour of this torture, Leopold gave way, with a shudder of disgust for himself, with a quiver of hatred for them.

"Settle it, then!" he cried to Hensdorff. "Only let me begone. Ay, you are all very cunning, but this may be a bad day's work for some of you—"

Christian's dark eyes, void of all expression, turned slowly on him as he gave this threat, which he himself felt to be futile. It was the last humiliation for Leopold that his rival showed no sign of triumph; now that Christian had gained his point he preserved the same icy indifference that he had shown while it was in debate; a hateful pose, this, of godlike calm!

Passionately, Leopold wished that he could emulate such serenity; as he left them he was swearing hotly to himself, "If I ever have any power I will break that man—God, how I will break him."

He wished to leave Schönbuchel without being observed, but he was not so fortunate as to achieve this. While he was hurriedly having his horse out (for he meant to ride at once and alone to Vienna), Eleanora came out on one of the little bowed balconies over the forecourt. She had been much petted that morning, for her father had told the Duchess the secret of Captain Leopold's identity and of the betrothal.

She smiled candidly at the young man, for she had been assured that he had come to be her companion and that she might walk with him in the woods and along the banks of the Danube, for they wished her to know her destined husband.

"Now, today, when Charlotte is ready, we can take that walk in the forest," she said, as she tied the wide ribbons of her straw hat under her chin. "It is so beautiful! And we can picnic in the woods."

These words were like a blow over the heart to Leopold. He stared at her so strangely that she thought him ill, and a tender concern clouded her gaiety.

"Something has happened?" she faltered.

"I must go back to Vienna," he answered. "I shall never be able to walk in those woods—"

"Oh, don't go!" cried Eleanora piteously. She had dreamt of him all night. "Back to the city, when here it is so lovely?"

"It is not for me," said Leopold in bitter distress. He could not bring himself to say "good-bye" but mounted and rode away.

But he must pause again, for by the gates was the Duchess, leaning on her stick, alarmed at his departure, at his hurried looks. He saluted her mechanically and she dropped a trembling curtsy.

"Sire," she stammered, "they tell me that you are the Emperor—"

"They tell you wrong, Madam," he replied, "for I am nothing, nothing."

He rode away, alone.

EL CERRITO GIRL NEAR DEATH, PAL SLAIN

Little hope is held for the recovery of Miss Ella Hibbs, 22, formerly of El Cerrito, who was brutally beaten by a mysterious assailant yesterday morning about three miles south of Hayward.

Miss Hibbs, was severely beaten by a roadside thug who killed her escort, Nick Traller, 222 of Livermore, by beating him on the head with the butt of a revolver.

Her clothes in tatters, screaming and hysterical, the girl staggered to the home of Joseph Nesbitt, Hayward rancher about 5 a. m. yesterday morning.

"He's after me," she sobbed, and collapsed upon the floor.

An incoherent tale of a wild ride with a giant negro, who she said, beat her escort to death, threw him over a fence, and then started raining blows upon her was told by the girl.

According to her story, the girl and Traller were motoring along the Niles road near Alvarado, when a negro stepped into the road and begged help. He told Traller that his car skidded into a ditch and asked Traller to assist him.

Traller allowed the negro to ride on the running board and started toward the supposed car.

Finally reaching a deserted spot on the Halvern road, three miles south of Hayward, the negro ordered Traller to get out of the car. When he obeyed, the negro produced a revolver, and beat Traller on the head with it.

The girl told authorities that when she attempted to help her escort, the negro beat her on the head with the revolver.

Leaving her lying in the road in a semi-conscious condition, the negro resumed his beating of Traller. Finally, he picked the body up and threw it over a fence.

Miss Hibbs feigned death and watched the negro steal Traller's car and ride away.

When he had disappeared, she got to her feet and staggered to the Nesbitt ranch a half mile away.

Police found Thraller's body at the place the girl had described.

His head was so badly bruised, that authorities could not tell whether death had resulted from a shot, or from the terrific beating he had received.

NATURAL GAS FOR BAY POINT

MARTINEZ, Jan. 17.— Coast Counties Gas and Electric company inaugurated serving of natural gas to domestic consumers in Bay Point at 8:20 o'clock this morning.

Bay Point not only had gas for the first time, but is also the first community in the northern part of the state to obtain straight natural gas.

Other Contra Costa county communities will be served with the natural gas in the near future from the same line, pending the building of the new Standard Pacific company lines from Kettleman Hills.

Congress Vote On Repeal Of Dry Law Soon

the request of Sheppard. Mitchell has not replied.

In the House the Coast Guard's $32,000,000 appropriation, increased by $2,000,000 to provide faster destroyers to battle rum row, was approved without a change.

With a table filled with laboratory equipment and a chart of the human body, Dr. Wm. I. Sirovich, New York Representative, sought to demonstrate to an attentive audience that prohibition has done more harm than good. The dry laws should be modified to safeguard the Nation's health, he said.

Effects Shown

He explained how industrial alcohol, which he said is the principal source of the bootleggers' supply, is denatured by the government to prevent illegal diversion for beverage purposes; how chemists hired by bootleg rings try to remove the ingredients, sometimes unsuccessfully; and finally how the denaturants affect the human body.

Representatives who listened to Sirovich with rapt attention for more than hour, squirmed uneasily in their seats as he flipped the liver on his unappetizing chart and described the effects of industrial alcohol on that indespensable organ. It is impossible, he said, to separate wood alcohol from grain alcohol. He added that wood alcohol produces blindness 90 times out of 100.

Rep. Maas, Rep., Minn, announced he would propose at a meeting of the House "wet bloc" to be called within a few days, that its members conduct public hearings on prohibition with the object of providing an outlet for organized wet sentiment. Since the regularly constituted House committees refuse to hold open meetings, he said, the unofficial anti-prohibition committee should do it.

as large.

Construction of the Ford plant in Long Beach was begun May 15, 1929. The Clinton Construction company was awarded the general contract for the main assembly building 930 by 315 feet, a two story transit warehouse 440 by 86 feet, an oil house 61 by 113 feet, and an office 104 by 80 feet.

400 Builders Employed

During the construction of the plant from 300 to 400 men were constantly employed.

In the construction of the southern plant 2900 tons of steel, 100,000 tons of rock, 238,000 bags of cement, 1526 concrete piles and 2735 composite piles were used. A water tower containing a 100,000 gallon tank stands 175 feet above the roof of the building.

The saw tooth type of roof was used in the construction to give better light and ventilation for the massive assembly building, which is brick trimmed on the exterior and contains a total of 350,000 square feet of floor space.

FATHERS, SONS AT ANNUAL BANQUET

Younger and older generations mingled last night at the first annual Father and Son banquet held in the Memorial hall under the auspices of the local Protestant churches and the Richmond Y. M. C. A.

George Chessum, secretary of the Metropolitan Boys' Work association of San Francisco, spoke on the subject of "Knights of the 20th Century." He compared modern youth with the knights of the middle ages. He pointed out that, whereas the olden knight wore armor, the youth of today climbs to success clothed in "purpose." He also compared the shield of the knight to preparedness of present manhood for any emergency. He stated that perseverance also served to keep a boy on the upward road against all obstacles. Chessum finally ended the comparison by saying that the helmet of youth should be prayer.

Percy Sanford, president of the Y. M. C. A. board of directors commended the fathers and sons present on the founding of a community father and son dinner.

Edward Seeger, representing the Memorial hall board of trustees, also wished success to the movement. He expressed the pleasure of the board at being able to offer the use of the hall for the evening to the fathers and sons free of charge. He stated that the board is now attempting to make the hall a community center for such activities.

An instrumental number was offered by Ed Hill Sr., and Ed Hill, Jr., accompanied by Emile Esola. Community singing was led by L A. Widner, while Edward Harlow acted as cheer leader

Clyde Parker acted as chairman of the evening and stated that this was the first time the fathers and sons of Richmond had gathered together in such a large gathering Approximately 150 attended the banquet

Following the program activities were transferred to the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, where fathers competed with their sons in games and races. The games were held under the direction of Reynold Carlson, director of the Richmond Y. M C. A.

The women's division of the Pasadena Realty board is an established feature. Mrs. Pauline Walker, of the same company is chairman.

Aimee, Mother Silent On New Probe Charge

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—UP—Amee Semple McPherson had practically nothing to say today regarding letters in which she assertedly was condemned by her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy.

The evangelist, in what little she did say, made no mention of the "blonde, curly-haired man" mentioned in the letters as the man behind the scenes at Angelus Temple.

The letters were given to local newspapers by Mrs. M. J. Crawford, who said they were written to her by Mrs. Kennedy at a time when the latter was estranged from her daughter.

Lauds Mother

"Even if mother wrote the letters I am sure she didn't feel that way," Aimee said blandly. "She is the most wonderful mother anyone could have and I am so happy that she is back with me."

Mrs. Kennedy was pretty silent too. She would not say whether she had written to Mrs. Crawford concerning "the big blonde boy who travels with sister and seems in command."

"It was so long ago," Mrs. Kennedy laughed, "that I really can't remember writing those letters."

Other statements in the letters brought similar denial or brushing aside from the two women.

Sidestep Questions

Mrs. Kennedy could not remember whether she had told Mrs. Crawford that Aimee had tried to put a blanket mortgage on all of the Four Square faith's property and had issued a "sidestepping statement" when followers began to ask questions.

Meanwhile, Deputy District Attorney Daniel Beecher took up the matter of the letters in his investigation of Temple finances. He summoned to his office today, Ralph Jordan, former publicity agent for Angelus temple. Jordan was said to have been mentioned prominently in the letters.

Aliens Limited To Terms Of State Land Act

Ineligible Japanese aliens, who would be permitted to lease property for commercial or residential purposes, would not be allowed to lease properties for church purposes only, according to a ruling made by Attorney General Webb in response to a request from the State Real Estate department, it has been announced to the California Real Estate association.

While not knowing of any case on this question, the attorney general believed that the Alien Land act permitting as authorized by the treaty between the United States and Japan, the leasing of property for commercial or residential purposes by ineligible Japanese aliens would not include the right to lease properties for other purposes.

CAR ASSEMBLY LINE STARTS IN 1931

floor to the other.

To Be Rushed

Officials at San Francisco have not been informed as to when ground will be broken in Richmond, but they said there need be no delay through preparation of plans and specifications.

"All they need to know is the exact type of building which is desired," said one of the San Francisco executives. "When that has been decided upon the completed plans, all ready for the builders to go ahead, can be turned out within 24 hours. So it is possible to proceed very quickly with the Richmond plant, though we have not been notified just when this will be."

The feeling exists that a move will be made in the near future, as it is understood the company desires to have the Richmond plant in full operation by the end of this year.

Fascinating Process

The Ford assembling process is a fascinating one and is the last word in intelligence and efficiency. All material starts at the top and works downward, being gradually drawn together into the finished car at the end of the famous Ford assembling line. In the case of the San Francisco plant the fifth floor is given over to storage of service parts, and the manufacturing process begins on the fourth floor where the bodies are assembled. The second and third floors are largely given over to the various paint processes by which the plain metal bodies assume the beautiful and lasting colors which make them objects of admiration on every boulevard.

Final Assembly

It is on the ground floor that the Ford efficiency is best grasped by the layman. Here is the final assembly line in the economical operation of which Henry Ford has surpassed all competitors. The assembly line is in motion, and on both sides stand the mechanics, each with a definite operation assigned to him, and this must be completed before the job passes him.

First comes the frame of the car, laid on the line in the finished shape in which it is received from the factory. To this are quickly affixed axles and wheels. An electric crane picks up the motor assembly and drops it neatly into place. The thousands of parts big and little, of which the motor owner is unconscious, but which make the car go, are snapped into position and securely fastened as the car moves rapidly down the line. At the end stands the man who puts on and adjusts the headlights. Beyond him is a white chart, and as he switches on the lights he adjusts the lamps with his chart.

End Of Line

This is the end of the mechanical assembly line. Meanwhile on an adjoining line the trimmers have been putting the finishing touches to the exterior of the bodies. One crane now picks up the chassis and lifts it easily to a new line, while another crane picks up one of the completed bodies and the two are fitted together.

Now it looks like an automobile and it still moves, and still mechanics swarm about it, putting on the finishing touches. Soon it reaches a man with a gasoline hose who removes the tank cap with a quarter turn of his hand, places a piece of cloth on the cowl to protect the paint, and gives it is first drink of gas—half a gallon. He removes the cloth and puts the cap back with a quarter turn as another workman sits down in the driver's seat and steps on the starter. The motor springs to life. A new Ford is born. That which a few minutes before was a mixed collection of pieces and parts has become a beautiful living organism ready to play its part in America's great scheme of personal transportation for the millions.

Here Soon

Such is mass production in a Ford plant, and such will be the picture soon unfolded in the city of Richmond.

There will be many improvements in the new plant over the old one in San Francisco. Many parts which now are stacked in the center of the floor will be carried overhead in the new plant, reducing still further the number of movements made by the workers increasing still further the marvelous speed and efficiency of the assembly line.

The Ford company owns 70 acres on the inner harbor adjoining the Par-Richmond terminal. This acreage will allow for the construction of a large, low building and will leave ample open space for the parking of workers' cars as well as for expansion in the years to come.

Ford parts will arrive by Ford ships, to be unloaded directly at the plant, and the finished product will go out to the Pacific coast states as well as to the export trade.

In the delegation which visited the San Francisco plant were Fred D. Parr, president of the Parr-Richmond Terminal company, and George W. Hendry, vice-president of that company. A trip is to be made in the near future by the local Rotary club to inspect the plant.

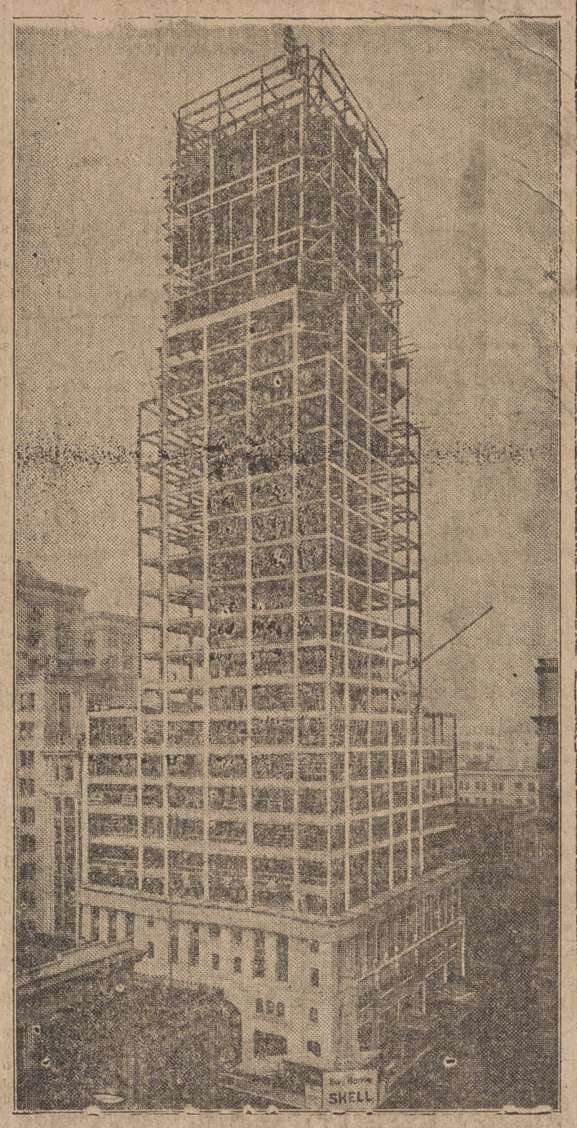
New Shell Home



ANOTHER milestone of progress, the new Shell Oil company building, at Bush and Battery streets in San Francisco, where record in structural steel erection was broken.

Record Broken In Building Of New Shell Home

The unfurling of Old Glory from the flag pole of the new Shell building terminated a record breaking program of structural steel construction. The entire 4,500 ton steel frame, from the first column in the sub basement to the last beam in the roof—32 floor levels, was erected in 58 eight hour days. The frame was completed at an average rate of one floor every 14 working hours. This unusual time is a record for Pacific coast building operations and compares favorably with recent rapid construction jobs in eastern cities.

Other construction work on the building is progressing rapidly. The reinforced concrete floors have been poured up to the 11th floor. The exterior terra-cotta and red brick backing has been placed up to the 5th floor.

Among those present at the recent flag raising ceremony were H. H. Anderson, general representative; C. M. Carson and William Barnett of the Shell Oil company; H. M. Walker, secretary and general manager and George Greenwood, general superintendent for P. J. Walker company; and B. J. Osborne, chief engineer of the structural department for the Moore Dry-Dock company.

Protect Your Furniture

A $1.25 to Rid Your Home of Moths May Save You Hundreds of Dollars.

MORTEMOTH KILLS MOTHS

The gas from Mortemoth crystals not only protects your furniture for a long time, but contact with it kills all moths, their eggs and their dangerous larvae in furniture which is already infested.

The proper method of using Mortemoth crystals is to tie them in small sacks, and to place these sacks down in the channel of the piece, as deeply as possible, behind the cushions, so that, upon expansion, the gas will spread and fill the spring units in the back and in the bottom of the piece.

When the sacks are empty, fill them again.
